Prosperity began to return. London became once more a city of merchants. It was again ourishing when the heathen English were converted to Christianity by Augustine, so much so that in 604 one of his companions, Mellitus, became its first bishop, Sebert being then king. Sir Walter Besant sees in the identity of the Cockney dialect lydy for lady, c.) with that of Essex, a proof that the new population were chie y from the East Saxons. At first the Christianising of London seemed to be a failure. Mellitus built a cathedral, but had to ee before the heathenism into which the king s sons relapsed. The failure, however, was but temporary, and the Church became altogether triumphant. The intense sense of nationality, which has always characterised the English people, comes out in...
