Excerpt: . . . 11 The Card memo and its implementation raise a number of con-cerns - some legal, others related more generally to whether the ad-ministration displayed a sufficiently healthy respect for the regu-latory process. Perhaps the most troubling aspect of the Card memo was its instruction regarding its third category - final rules that had been published but had not yet taken effect - a category applicable to two rules discussed later in this report: The roadless area conservation rule and the arsenic rule. There is no question that once a rule has been signed by the agency head 26 and published in the Federal Register, it has been promulgated. Moreover, there is no doubt that a rules effective date is an inte-gral and substantial component of a final rule, and it is established that a change or suspension in the effective date (either before or after it has gone into effect) may only be accomplished through a further notice and public comment period (unless an exception is 27 appropriate). As noted, such decisions must be...
